A Biographical Sketch of Jimmy Hitchcock

Jimmy was born in Inverness, Bullock County, Alabama, on June 28, 1911. For the record he was James Franklin Hitchcock; but early in life, the affectionate nickname "Jimmy" was used instead of the more formal "James;" and everywhere, he was just Jimmy. Even in his business life, where he was a loved and respected public servant, and in his varied civic, social, educational and religious activities, he was known as Jimmy Hitchcock—and his stationery always so stated.

One of five sons of J. F. Hitchcock, Jimmy played sandlot baseball and other sports with his brothers and friends in Bullock County; and when he was 15 years of age, he played varsity guard on the 1925 Union Springs High School football squad. The following year, one of Jimmy's brothers, W.D. "Bully," who was then coaching at Malone, Florida, High School, persuaded Jimmy to join him in Malone. Bully converted his younger brother to a half-back and by so doing, helped Jimmy launch a brilliant football career.

After a year at Malone High, Jimmy moved to Southern Military Academy, then located at Greensboro, Alabama, where he was trained by Nurmi Nelson. At the age of 18, he entered the college he was to help make famous football wise; and as an Auburn freshman, he was under the tutelage of Montgomery's "Bull" McFaden.

In his first year of varsity competition at Auburn in 1930, he was outstanding as a triple-threat half-back. In 1932, as captain of his team, he led Auburn to an undefeated season and won All America Honors for his ability. He was Auburn's first All American on the football field.

In the minds of Jimmy's thousands of fans, the Auburn-Tulane game of 1932 stands out. In that game, the stands stood in admiration as the swift, swivel-hipped Hitchcock twice raced 70 yards for touchdowns, outdistancing a good Tulane defense and handing the Green Wave its only defeat of the season 19-7.

They also remember well the Ole Miss game that same year when Jimmy sat out the first half with a week-old injury, then entered the game with his Alma Mater trailing by one touchdown and in a matter of minutes, crossed the goal line with the tying touchdown. With only three minutes left in the game, Hitchcock fired a 20-yard pass to Allen Rogers for a touchdown and a thrilling 14-7 victory.

Ripley's "Believe It or Not" column records that Hitchcock punted 232 times in his college career and never had one of his kicks blocked.

He led the Southern Conference in scoring his Senior year, literally racing across the goal line for 71 points.

He was also All America in baseball at Auburn for his fine play there in the spring of 1933. His baseball prowess eventually led to a big league career. He played short stop for the Boston Braves, and he also played in the Yankee system with Columbus of the American Association and with Chattanooga of the Southern Association. In between seasons, he acted as Assistant Football Coach to Head Coach Jack Meagher at his beloved Auburn.
